

Celeste Stoker

Celeste Stoker began her riding journey as a child with Woodside Jr. Riders, shifting full-time to dressage at age 11. She trained through PSG while working with top FEI and national dressage riders including Gina Duran, Natalya Slipchenko, and Olympian Kasey Perry-Glass.

At UC Davis, Celeste competed on the equestrian team and developed a passion for horse husbandry through hands-on experience in the breeding program and as a staff member at the university's import quarantine facility, where they worked almost exclusively with elite stallions.

Celeste also discovered a love for teaching youth, returning to Woodside Jr. Riders to instruct advanced groups and manage barn operations. With an emphasis on correct basics, balance, and fostering happy horse–rider partnerships, Celeste helps students grow into skilled, thoughtful, and well-rounded horse people.
